

Trisaetum is owned by James and Andrea Frey with James and Greg McClellan serving as winemakers with consultation from Josh Bergstrom. James and Andrea Frey were married in 1995 and by chance ended up on their honeymoon in Napa Valley where the dream of owning a winery began. In 2003 they decided to purchase property in the Willamette Valley. After two years, the preparation work was finally complete and twenty-one acres of the Coast Range vineyard were planted in thirteen different blocks of the Pinot Noir clones. In 2005 they purchased a second vineyard in Ribbon Ridge AVA, where they constructed the state-of-the-art winery. This succulent, lengthy effort will also evolve for several years and offer prime wine. Aside from Pinot Noir, the winery has a strong focus on Riesling.
